

REED TAKES STUMP, FORGIVING WILSON

Expresses 'Profound Sympathy for Very Sick Man' in Opening Speech.

OPPOSED TO DICTATION

Senator Expresses Opinion Missouri People Will Uphold His Independence.

ASSAILS HARDING REGIME

Failed to Keep Its Pledges, He Says—Asserts His Loyalty to Party.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. MOOREHEAD, Mo., May 6.—Senator James A. Reed opened his campaign for the Democratic renomination here this afternoon. His speech began with the fight he must wage from now to August 1 to win back the support of the rural democracy, now largely antagonistic to him because of his opposition to Woodrow Wilson and the League of Nations. Mr. Reed's main strength is in the larger cities.

In the opening of his speech, Mr. Reed declared: "I come to close, not to open, wounds. Speaking of ex-President Wilson, 'a very sick man,' Senator Reed made this statement: 'My sentiments toward him are not those of animosity, but of profound sympathy.' Then he added: 'I believe the people of Missouri in the coming campaign will not permit an ex-President to tell them how to vote, and that they will not punish a Senator for declining to permit a President to tell him how to vote.'"

A large crowd from Moberly and surrounding towns filled a big tent, brought here from Chicago especially for the most momentous political gathering ever held in Randolph county. The tent has a seating capacity of nine thousand.

Centralization Charged. "The Democratic party is about to select its candidates for one of the most important elections ever held," said Senator Reed. "Democratic success ought to insure a return to the old policies under which have been preserved the liberties of the people. The march toward centralization should be arrested; the control by special interests now impudently asserted terminated, and the Government be once more responsible to the Democrats of the country."

Senator Reed then attacked the Harding administration, saying it had failed to redeem the pledges by which it gained office. Touching on women's suffrage, the Senator declared both parties recognized it was here to stay. Regarding prohibition, he said: "The Eighteenth Amendment is a part of the Constitution and should be observed so long as it is written into the law of the land. "It is charged that because of disputes over patronage I opposed President Wilson in everything he desired," he went on. "A Senator who would allow either animosity or friendship to check his official acts would be unfit to hold that high office. The charge is not only untrue, but, as the Congressional Record will show, it is ridiculous."

Declares Charge Absurd. "The absurdity of that part of the charge which asserts that I opposed the President in everything he desired is illustrated by the fact that during his incumbency the President sent to the Senate more than forty thousand appointments for confirmation and that I voted for all save some six or seven appointments."

"The record also proves that upon questions covered by the Democratic platform upon which we were both elected, there were no differences between the President and myself. "Upon questions not covered by the platform I supported the President when I thought him right. Frequently I appeared (within the limits of my poor abilities) as his champion when the questions were important and even crucial to his administration. I shall later refer to specific instances."

"A difference did arise between the President on the one hand and Senator Stone and myself upon the other regarding three appointive officers in the western district of Missouri. It arose in this wise: "In 1912 the Federal bank bill was before the Senate. I labored for weeks to concentrate the complete control of the system in a Federal Reserve Board to be appointed by the President. I believed the money and credits of the country should not be controlled by the big banks of New York.

"With the bill thus amended the President appointed Thomas D. Jones as a member of the board. Mr. Jones was a director of the Harvester Trust. The Harvester Trust was a subsidiary of the Morgan interests. I did not believe the Morgan bank ought to have a representative upon the Federal Reserve Board. I made a speech opposing Mr. Jones. The President withdrew the appointment."

"After this the President declined to accept the recommendations of Senator Stone and myself. But all these differences, and they were really inconsequential, were amicably adjusted long before the campaign of 1916.

"It is charged that in the Senate I opposed Democratic principles and policies. No living man can point to a speech or vote of mine that is not in absolute accord with the established fundamental doctrines of the Democracy. "As to the League of Nations, it deals with foreign relations and those relations have never been regarded as the subject of partisan politics. I voted against the league. I believed it would imperil the republic. I could not support it. My views have not changed. "I will never knowingly cast a vote which will directly or indirectly obligate the United States to draft our boys into the military service and to send them to fight and die in the quarrels of foreign countries."

INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL ABSORBS IDLE LABOR

Secretary Davis Reports Unemployment Decreased by Widespread Awakening.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Employment conditions in the United States demonstrate that there is "widespread industrial awakening extending from coast to coast." Secretary of Labor Davis declared to-day, commenting upon investigations and reports made by the Federal Employment Service. Although there are a few dark spots, in which considerable unemployment is still reported, Mr. Davis added that the entire country can be said to have come out of the depression.

"The farm situation is decidedly encouraging," Mr. Davis said. "The demand for farm help from all sections of the country is indicative of the optimistic attitude of the farmer. As there are 6,446,000 farms in the country, they will absorb a tremendous amount of labor."

"New York State reports a great decrease in unemployment. There is a revival of business in the New England States, notwithstanding the suspension of textiles. I am pleased to advise that reports coming from New Jersey state that building and contract operations are now in full swing. Outside workers are being encouraged to come to the State, especially in the building lines. Ohio reports increased activity along all lines. Pennsylvania is showing a decided improvement in industry."

"There is considerable improvement in Indiana. The Federal director of Spokane, Wash., under date of April 22 reports labor conditions throughout the State as showing gradual improvement. Farm help is in demand, with a slight shortage. There is an increase in building operations. "There has been a large absorption of labor in Baltimore. Great building activity is going on at that point. Kentucky has not shown much change in activity in the last month. The West North Central district, comprising the States of Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas, are all entering upon an era of considerable activity. In some of these sections, especially North Dakota, there is an actual shortage of experienced farm help."
